

The Hart's Mill Project

Hart's Mill for the People – one last opportunity to get it right

The Hart's Mill Project is a community alliance that has been formed to campaign for a more sustainable model of development at the Hart's Mill precinct in Port Adelaide.

The Hart's Mill and Adelaide Milling Co buildings are unique and speak of the history of the working port and its importance in the founding of South Australia, and we believe that the current plans for this area of the precinct need to be re-thought.

With the Port waterfront undergoing huge change, the Hart's Mill precinct offers us all one last opportunity to get it right, to build diversity into the redevelopment of the Port waterfront through an inspired and sensitive conversion of the Mills. Instead of the private apartments proposed by the developers, we envisage a development that:

- is publicly accessible and open for use by the community
- respects the history and heritage of the Mills and of the Port
- allows the buildings to retain their landmark scale and prominence
- retains and promotes the adjacent open space
- celebrates the special place the Mills have in our community
- and can be a win-win for both the developers and the community

We need your ideas and aspirations. Could there be a world class cultural centre with galleries, cafes, workshops and theatres? A satellite venue for a major cultural institution? What do you think?

For more information about the Hart's Mill Project, what's protected and what isn't, what is proposed to be built around the Mills and how this will affect our views of the Mills, check out our website and provide your thoughts at:

www.hartsmillproject.org

If you'd like to see more images of the Mills (or add your own) go to:
www.flickr.com/groups/the_harts_mill_project/

Find us on Facebook:

www.facebook.com/pages/The-Harts-Mill-Project/149430861769715

We'd love you to join us and contribute your ideas.